

What the Press say:

You'll need to remortgage your house to own Andy Manson's handywork. This droolsome dream guitar is not only constructed by one of Britain's top luthiers, but also from the very finest materials in the world. Check out the spec: exhibition grade German spuce top, American rock maple back and sides, five-piece laminate neck and 100 year old Brazillian rosewood fingerboard.

What's more, the bridge, binding, headstock facing and scratchplate are all made of equally exotic (and expensive) woods. Phew!

If you have a spare £20,000 to spend and you want own this beauty then contact Steve DeLaHaye.
